THE TONE

Warm, human and honest — like explaining something to a friend, not reading ad copy. No hype, no hard sell. The sentences are short because they are spoken, not read. Let them breathe.

READING NOTES

Each line is timed to what happens on screen. The duration on the left is how long that line has in the picture — treat it as a target, not a cage. The gaps between lines are real silence in the cut; you do not need to fill them.

HOW TO SAY IT

Revel	REV -uhl — as in “revelry”. Never “re-VEL”.
lets revel dot io	Written out on purpose. Say it as the address: “let’s revel dot I-O”.
R S V P	Spelled out, letter by letter: “are-ess-vee-pee”.
Q R code	Spelled out: “cue-are code”.
V A T	Spelled out: “vee-ay-tee”.
Stripe	The payment company. English, as written.
Mira, Ren, Noa, Jordan, Bea, Lena, Felix, Paul	Characters in the demos. Say them naturally.

1 Episode nine. Recurring events. A weekly session, set up
00:00–00:11
10.8 s once — first as the organizer writing the rule, then as someone who just wants to know when the next one is.

— 1.2 s of silence —

2 Describe the night once, as a template. A name, a start
00:12–00:24
12.3 s and end time, and where it happens. Tickets or a simple R S V P. Every week from here on is built from this one blueprint.

3 Then the rule. Weekly, on Thursdays, with no end date.
00:25–00:37
12.4 s Auto-publish means each new date goes live the moment it's made, eight weeks ahead — and Revel keeps the calendar topped up by itself.

4 One click, and there are the coming Thursdays. Every 00:37–00:53
15.3 s one is a real event, with its own page, its own R S V P list, and its own capacity. Change the template and the change carries forward. Cancel one week without touching the rest.

— 2.7 s of silence —

5 For your people, the series has a page of its own, with 00:56–01:07
11.2 s every date on it. Follow it, and each new date lands in their notifications as it's added. No need to keep checking back.

6 Set it up once, and it runs every week. Revel is free and 01:07–01:14
7.2 s open source. Find it at lets revel dot io.
